Maya joined Greenhill School only two weeks ago. On club day she wanted to meet new people, but she did not know where to start. First she watched the drama group. The students were practising a short scene and invited her to read one line. Maya was nervous, yet everyone waited patiently.

Next she visited the coding club. Two boys showed her a small robot that followed a black line. Maya changed one instruction, and the robot turned at the right moment. At the gardening table she planted mint in a paper pot. By the end of the afternoon, her card had four stamps.

Maya chose the drama club because she enjoyed working with the group. She also learned that joining does not mean being perfect from the beginning. The club meets every Wednesday in room 14. Maya wrote the date in her planner before she went home.
