An island without cars – the first plan

On Monday at 8:15, Amelia arrived at the community garden. The group planned to collect useful information. The first steps worked well, but the situation changed because the timetable had changed. Two pupils suggested different answers. Before choosing, the group checked the available information and spoke to the organiser. It then agreed to update the timetable and send it to the group. As a result, the presentation began on time. Afterwards, Amelia recorded the change and one reason for it. This helped the next group understand both the action and the decision behind it.

An island without cars – what changed

On Wednesday at 15:30, Leo arrived at the media room. The group planned to help a younger group. The first steps worked well, but the situation changed because the first meeting place was unavailable. Two pupils suggested different answers. Before choosing, the group checked the available information and spoke to the organiser. It then agreed to move to a suitable room and tell everyone. As a result, the plan worked with only a short delay. Afterwards, Leo recorded the change and one reason for it. This helped the next group understand both the action and the decision behind it.
